

Maggie Saunders

Maggie enjoys using her skills as an actor to give practical and immediate feedback from the perspective of behaviours and interpersonal skills.

Maggie has worked in training and development for 15 years in both public and private companies.

Maggie is an actor, business role-player and facilitator. She works using both straight role-play and forum theatre to engage delegates emotionally with some of the thorny issues they may have with their employees and peers.

One of her specialities is using bespoke role-play to get delegates to work on current issues, exploring safely the strategies that will enable a more successful future outcome.

For the last five years she has devised and run workshops for teenagers in colleges and schools to raise their self-esteem and encourage their interpersonal skills.
